

Colleges of Oxford University

This is an additional paper, created to accompany my genealogical research, either relating to my own family history, or to a specific project such as a One-Name Study or similar <http://anglersrest.net>.

Oxford University comprises of 45 colleges.

Each college and halls linking into the main university, this is like that of a federal system, as shown here.

Each of the colleges and halls are financially independent and self-governing, however, the University can create a broad policy or rule, that each of the colleges and halls must comply with.

There are differences between the colleges and halls:

- The founders of the halls followed a specific Christian denomination
- Generally smaller
- Offer fewer courses.

In addition, the colleges vary in what academia is available:

- General colleges, these are open to undergraduates
- Graduate Students only

One other point, there are Colleges called Halls, and Halls called Colleges!

On the next page you will see all the colleges and halls listed in addition to their websites.
